

Humphrey, Dumbo and the Banana Heist

Once there was a chimpanzee called Dumbo and an orangutang called Humphrey, they were both cousins. One day they were playing rock paper scissors in a tree until the Jemima gang [the monkeys] approached and said, “hey mate I will give you this dragon fruit if you steal these bananas with us.” They knew it was a horrible thing to do but they would do anything for a dragon fruit and what could go wrong?

“Yes of course!” Dumbo yelled.

“Me tooooo!” Humphrey continued. As they went from tree to tree stealing bananas, Humphrey abruptly stopped, “Do you think this is a good idea?” Humphrey inquired.

Whilst they were still swinging, stealing bananas, their parents caught them and started chasing them. Both got tired and fell to the ground. They woke up in their bed and heard their mothers say, “you are both grounded for life!”

The moral of our story is that you shouldn't do things that you know are wrong and you shouldn't trust strangers. Instead you should tell a trusted adult and make sure you don't get bribed. Always pay attention to your surroundings and if something doesn't feel right (instead of what Humphrey did) safely remove yourself from the situation.